BLACK EAGLE FALLS 0-8 Handicap Recommended

During the 1804-05 winter, the Indians told Lewis and Clark they would find a Black Eagle's nest below the falls of the Missouri. On June 14, 1805, Captain Lewis saw the nest just as had been described by the Indians, confirming that he had found the Great Falls of the Missouri. Lewis and Clark called this falls the "Upper Pitch", and never used the name Black Eagle Falls.

RAINBOW FALLS 9-16 Handicap Recommended

In 1872, Thomas P. Roberts, a railroad surveyor named Rainbow Falls because of the rainbows which are often visible in the midst of the water as it tumbles over the rock shelf. Lewis and Clark labeled this falls the "Beautiful Cascade" or "Handsome Falls".

CROOKED FALLS 17-27 Handicap Recommended

Of the names given to falls on the Missouri by Lewis and Clark, only the name "Crooked Falls" has endured. Lewis wrote that the rock shelf cut "obliquely" across the river with a drop of 19 feet.

THE GREAT FALLS 28-Up Handicap Recommended

On June 13, 1805 Lewis and four men were walking overland in search of falls, and about noon, heard the "agreeable sound" of falling water. Lewis called the scene "the grandest sight I ever beheld". The name "Great Falls" was used by the Indians and most likely referred to the several falls; today, Great Falls refers to Ryan Dam.
